

1 Valid Consent

I choose Google Privacy Policy as an example

We'll share personal information outside of Google when we have your consent

Art 6(1)(a) the data subject has given consent to the processing of his or her personal data for one or more specific purposes;

For legal reasons

We will share personal information outside of Google if we have a good-faith belief that disclosure of the information is reasonably necessary to:

Art 6 (1) (c)

We use encryption to keep your data private while in transit

Art 6 (1) (d)

[We maintain \[servers around the world\]\(https://policies.google.com/privacy?hl=en-US#footnote-servers\) and your information may be processed on servers located outside of the country where you live. Data protection laws vary among countries, with some providing more protection than others. Regardless of where your information is processed, we apply the same protections described in this policy. We also comply with certain \[legal frameworks\]\(https://policies.google.com/privacy/frameworks?hl=en-US\) relating to the transfer of data.](#)

Art 6 (1) (e)

In my opinion, Google's consent mechanisms for sharing personal data (e.g. with third-party apps or for personalization) are largely in line with GDPR's requirements, especially in terms of specificity and informed consent

2 Access Personal Data

Art. 15 (1) GDPR:

The data subject shall have the right to obtain from the controller confirmation as to whether or not personal data concerning him or her are being processed, and, where that is the case, access to the personal data and the following information:

- purposes of processing,
- categories of personal data,
- recipients (or categories) with whom data is shared,
- storage period (or criteria for determining it),
- rights of rectification/erasure/restriction,
- right to lodge a complaint,
- where data was not collected from the subject, the source,
- and details about automated decision-making (including profiling).

Art. 15 (3) GDPR: The controller must provide a copy of the personal data undergoing processing. The first copy is free of charge; subsequent copies may incur a reasonable fee.

Art. 12 (3) GDPR: The controller must provide the information "without undue delay and in any event within one month."

Managing, reviewing, and updating your information

When you're signed in, you can always review and update information by visiting the services you use. For example, Photos and Drive are both designed to help you manage specific types of content you've saved with Google.

We also built a place for you to review and control information saved in your Google Account. Your Google Account includes

For Google services, I can freely access, export, and delete my personal data.

3 Anonymisation & Pseudonymisation

Anonymisation = permanent removal of identifying elements → data is outside GDPR.

Pseudonymisation = replacing identifiers with codes, but keeping a key → still personal data, but better protected.
